would publish these books whether he could sell them or not. But sometimes, even in an evil world, virtue is rewarded. I am making money on them and you will too.

HUNGER by KNUT HAMSUN to whom the Nobel Prize for Literature has just been awarded. Authorized edition, genuinely good translation, foreword by Edwin Björkman that gives just the desirable information about this little known genius. $2.50

SAN CRISTÓBAL DE LA HABANA

By JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER. An exquisitely written and exquisitely manufactured book about Habana and Hergesheimer. I doubt if any American has ever written anything like it. From anyone else it would be an impertinence. You may think it that from him—but it's a book that will live. $3.50

MOON-CALF FLOYD DELL'S novel isn't exotic and it isn't propagandist which will disappoint a lot of people who don't like him. But because it's a fine, vivid and moving interpretation of American life today—and the work of a coming man—it's going to be the biggest thing I've had since Java Head. $2.50

MARGOT ASQUITH
AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY*(By the Wife of the ex-Prime Minister of England)*

"This confidant of princes, poets, nobles, factory girls, men about town and clergymen writes her story in the same dashing, regardless manner in which she lived it. She sets down everything, from her street flirtations to her serious love affairs, with utter indifference, and comments with the same freedom on the characters of men and women living and dead. She had the friendship and high esteem of men like Gladstone and Jowett. She sets down the poems young men wrote her and the repartee of famous drawing rooms. The book is fascinating from the first page to the last."—New York Times.

POOR WHITE

by

SHERWOOD ANDERSON

This novel of American life is by the author of WINESBURG, OHIO, which the N. Y. Times ranked among the six best books of American fiction of last year.

We seek to avoid the use of superlatives in announcing books under this imprint because of an instinctive desire to give more than the advertisements promise. In the case of POOR WHITE, however, we have no hesitancy in saying that this novel is great—literally. (See the dictionary).

"We talk about foreign markets, of selling bath tubs to the Patagonians and shower baths to the Esquimaux while we often absolutely close our eyes to the unwashed among our own employees."—Page 347—"The Business Philosophy of Moses Irons."

Is there real romance in business?

TO some men business is a drab, routine, uninteresting way of making a living. Not so to Moses Irons. The chief character in "The Business Philosophy of Moses Irons," by Daniel Louis Hanson, fights his way through 19 episodes to a business success of noteworthy dimensions. He knows men; he is witty, daring, and at times uncanny in his judgment. He solves the most difficult business problems to the intense satisfaction and delight of the readers. His wholesome philosophy is the kind desired by every successful man.

Here is business fiction every business man will respond to. Are you ready for the demand that's coming?

Modern Welding Methods

OXY-ACETYLENE THERMIT
ELECTRIC ARC AND RESISTANCE

By VICTOR W. PAGÉ, M. S. A. E.

292 6"x9" Pages

Price $3.00

200 Illustrations

One of the most instructive books on methods of joining metals yet published for the mechanic and practical man. It is not an engineering book but a work that gives the information a factory executive and shop man wants about all kinds of welding, soldering and brazing processes. It considers in detail oxy-acetylene welding, the Thermit process and all classes of electric arc and resistance welding. It shows all the apparatus needed and shows how to use it. It considers the production of welding gases, construction and operation of welding and cutting torches of all kinds. It details the latest approved methods of preparing work for welding. All forms of gas and electric welding machines are described and complete instructions are given for installing electric spot and butt welders. Cost data is given and all methods of doing work economically are described.

THE MODERN ELECTROPLATER

By KENNETH M. COGGESHALL. This is the most complete and practical book on electroplating and allied processes that has been published as a text for the student or professional plater. It is written in simple language and explains all details of electroplating in a concise yet complete manner. Full instructions are given for the preparation and finishing of the work and formulae and complete directions are included for making all kinds of plating solutions, many of these having been trade secrets until published in this instruction manual. Anyone interested in practical plating and metal finishing will find this book a valuable guide and complete manual of the art. 142 illustrations. 276 pages.

HOW TO MAKE AND USE A SMALL CHEMICAL LABORATORY

An introduction to the study of inorganic chemistry with directions for the construction of a small laboratory

By RAYMOND FRANCIS YATES. The treatise covers all of the essentials of elementary chemistry. The law of definite proportions, solutions, crystalloids, colloids, electrolysis, etc., are explained. The second part of the book is devoted to chemical and electro-chemical experiments. Only those experiments that will tend to broaden the readers' knowledge of chemistry in general have been chosen.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT

November 20, 1920

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men of course do seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves, by way of amends, to be a help and ornament thereunto."—BACON.

The Cost of Binding

THE Union of the New York Binders has followed the method of last year and agreed with the employers that it will rest its demand for higher wages on the results of the arbitration of the printers' demands. If any percentage of increase is to be granted the printers, the binders are to be satisfied with the same award. The book publishers' business is a far larger item in the total business at the bindery than it is at the printer's; the relation of present publishing conditions to a reasonable adjustment of wages ought to be considered.

The employing binders know that book publishers have now caught up with the book shortage that has existed for the past fifteen months. They know that they are beginning to have to solicit business instead of having to decline it; they know that publishers have had to discontinue hundreds of titles that would formerly have gone thru the binderies in a steady flow during the quiet months; they know that the falling market in binding cloth and binding board is going to make publishers hold off a little to assure the best possible levels for 1921 manufacturing; they know that the skilled labor of binderies is not underpaid at the present levels. Anyone who encourages the idea of advancing wages under these conditions is menacing his own industry, and it seems hardly conceivable that the arbitrators of the printing agreement, sitting, as they do, with the October and November conditions of manufacturing before them, should decide for a wage increase.

The book business, whose selling prices have been increased much less than those of other merchandise, is having and deserves to have an active season, but that is no reason why it should be anxious to spoil this by underwriting advances in price for 1921.

Clear for Action

THE week of Thanksgiving often proves a time when the retailer who has a large holiday business becomes "low in his mind." The accumulated books loom large, and the number of days to Christmas seems small. A good clean-up of stock seems well nigh impossible.

Now is the right time to look back at the figures of previous years. It will probably be found that there has always been this feeling of facing the impossible, that November business, however brisk, never seemed to measure up to what was expected of it. The manager is thinking so hard of Christmas and of aisles jammed to their limit, and the salesmen busy without rest from morning to night, that even a good active business seems like a painful lull. The store manager who has full and accurate statistics will pass thru this November depression the most happily. He will know just how much stock was on hand November 1st and how much is likely to be on hand December 1st. He will know just how rapidly the sales will mount on succeeding weeks, and will appreciate the benefit that is coming to him this year from having an early Thanksgiving. The reading of the business weather map does not give any reason for seeing a heavy frost settle on December sales. In spite of the natural liquidation and puzzling manufacturing conditions, there are no signs of a "blue" Christmas. People have reason to be thankful for a prosperous year, and they will be remembering their friends generously at Christmas, and they are bound to find that books can express more to their friends at a reasonable expenditure than any other gift.

What every bookstore needs now is a supreme and concentrated effort toward selling efficiency, an efficiency that will allow every square foot to yield its greatest value, an efficiency that will place the best salesmanship available at the service of those who turn to books, an efficiency that will endeavor to make those who buy books so satisfied with their decision that they will turn to the book counters again and again during the succeeding months.

There is no reason why bookstores should not find themselves in sound condition on January 1st with stocks brought down to a low level and with decks cleared for energetic work in making 1921 a record-breaking book year.

Important Kipling Transfer

A transfer of publishing rights made this week is of unusual interest to the book-trade. The Century Company has relinquished to Doubleday, Page & Company its interest in the first and second "Jungle Book" and "Captains Courageous." This brings together on one list all of the Kipling material, and will enable the trade to purchase all the books in the cloth binding in uniform shape, as well as in the flexible leather. This transfer brings renewed attention to the important part that is played in the total sales of leading authors of the books for young people that they may happen to have written. Year after year such titles sell in steady and almost unfluctuating number, and after many titles of most popular fiction begin to fade from the public eye the young people keep the author in the field of the best sellers. One has only to think of the place that "The Story of a Bad Boy" has given to the sale of Aldrich, the part that "Huck Finn" and "Tom Sawyer" have played in Mark Twain's sales, the place that "The Wonder Book" and "Tanglewood Tales" have given Hawthorne, "Water Babies" and Greek Heroes" to Kingsley, and "The Treasure Island" and "Kidnapped" to Stevenson to realize how widespread this interesting situation is. With full realization of the large yearly sales of such important and perennially active Kipling titles as "Kim," "Soldiers Three" and "The Day's Work," the book-trade will be conscious that Kipling's appeal to children is the steadiest feature of the Kipling market, and probably another ten years will make this even more visible.

Printing Arbitrators Appointed

In the arbitration of the demands for increased wages between the New York printers, Dean George W. Kirchwey of Columbia is appointed to serve on the case with the Typographical Union No. 6, and William F. Ogburn, Professor of Economics at Columbia, arbitrator with the Pressmen's Union No. 51. These are selected by the Employing Printers' Association, and the other arbitrators have not yet been selected. Conditions in the cost of living and especially conditions in the demand for printing are changing so rapidly that it seems likely that an increase would be a misfortune for the employees as well as for the consumers of printing, as this would slow up the demand.

Brentano's Elect Officers

At the last annual meeting of the Stockholders of Brentano's, held on November 5th, 1920, Ernest Eisele and John Loos were elected to the Board of Directors.

The officers for the following year will be as follows: Arthur Brentano, President; Mrs. F. Brentano, C. E. Butler, and E. Eisele, Vice-Presidents; C. E. Butler, Treasurer; Clive Mecklem, Assistant Treasurer; S. Gugenheim, Secretary; Thos. P. Heffley, Lowell Brentano, Arthur Brentano, Jr., Assistant Secretaries.

Goudy Goes With the Monotype

Frederic W. Goudy, the designer of so many standard type faces, has now become art director for the Lanston Monotype Company. This connection has real significance for the book-trade, as a large part of book publishing is done now on monotype machines, and the connection of such a designer as Mr. Goudy with this Company ought to point to a steady improvement in the already varied faces that are obtainable for monotype composition.

Mr. Goudy has a record in the designing of type faces that is without equal in printing history. At the present time nearly fifty complete fonts have been designed by him, many of them in common use in thousands of printing shops. An English critic of printing has said of one of the Goudy types that it is the best piece of type designing for general use since Caslon.

Boston Bindery Sold Out

On November 23rd the book bindery of Ephraim Adam & Company at 287 Congress Street, Boston, will be sold out at public auction, this auction to include all material, machinery, motors, etc., over five hundred items altogether. This bindery has been one of the oldest and most important in Boston, and its ownership is in the second generation under the same family. The material is to be crated and shipped, the owners taking care of this detail. Many binderies from other cities are entering bids for parts of the plant.

District Attorney Talks to Bookmen

At the November dinner of The Booksellers' League given, as in October, at the "Maisonette," 10 West 45th Street, New York, Leroy W. Ross, United States District Attorney, talked informally of his office and work in connection with the 18th Amendment and the enforcement of the Volstead Act. The difficulties, he confessed, were stupendous, but the progress thus far in his territory was hopeful. As the law of the land it is the duty of every patriotic citizen not only to observe it himself, but to aid in so far as he can the authorities in its enforcement. If a spirit of resentment against the law continues, then the antagonistic attitude of the anarchist to the enforcement of other laws would find dangerous encouragement and lead to disorder.

The other speakers were George H. Grubb, the London representative of the house of Putnam, whose library war work in the interests of the A. E. F. was intensive for a period of two years. He gave a budget of facts and figures that emphasized his enthusiasm while wearing the U. S. uniform in this service. Hereward Carrington, the widely-known author and lecturer on psychic subjects rounded out an enjoyable evening with an address on the present-day development of the study of the unseen and the unknown.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLISHERS

A rumor has reached us that the larger publishers are not optimistic about the Christmas business for 1920 and are, therefore, retrenching on the size of editions and on their advertising. As this feeling is contrary to our own, we are writing this open letter for two reasons:

First: If we are wrong in our optimism, we ought to change our plans and retrench.

Second: If we are right, something should be done to kill the rumor and to put renewed faith into the minds of the bookselling world, so that we may all pull together for what we believe to be the biggest Christmas business we have ever seen.

With this in mind, we are giving our reasons for our optimism.

There is no question but that the wool, leather, cotton, and other raw material businesses are in an exceedingly bad way and that Boston has been just as hard hit as any other city,—perhaps more so. On top of this, Boston has had, and is having a hard time on account of the bank situation, with several banks closed by the Bank Examiners, so that some $25,000,000 of our business and individual deposits are tied up and probably will not be in circulation again before 1921.

We all know that a Presidential Election takes a lot of talking, and, therefore, just so much less time is left for reading.

In spite of all of these factors, the book business has never been as good as it is today. We have made a larger per cent of gain in October than our average gain for the other months in 1920 and they have all shown a pleasing increase over 1919. We are spending more money advertising, but not an amount greater than the additional business warrants. What then makes business so good? We do not claim that any new methods of bookselling are responsible, or that we are more brilliant than we were a year ago. We have discounted the fact that prices are higher than they were a year ago and are not deceived by the larger figures for the same number of books. We do believe, however, that the increase comes, and will continue to come, because books are cheap in comparison with other necessities and luxuries; that there has been no profiteering either by publisher or bookseller; that the public knows that it can get more per dollar in books than in anything else; that the war has produced more readers and buyers of books; that in "hard times" the public turns to books for Christmas presents with greater interest than when money is no object; and that individual books, now published or to be published for Christmas, will never be any cheaper and, therefore, there is no object in waiting for price reductions.

Whether our reasons are correct or not, may be a question, but the worst thing that could happen would be a lack of optimism on the part of the publishers or of the booksellers, for that might produce just what no one in the book-trade wants. If the publisher makes a smaller edition or does not reprint at this time, when his supply on hand of "going titles" is getting low, we booksellers are going to be out of the best selling books during the last ten days before Christmas. If the bookseller has no confidence in the coming Christmas season and refuses to buy, he is going to be without stock when the rush comes, as it surely will.

The Christmas of 1914 could not have been worse from any point of view, and yet our Christmas business fell off less than ten per cent. Conditions are infinitely better this year than they were in 1914, and the worst that can happen will be that we would do about the same in dollars and cents this year as we did last.

The war is over, the Republican party is in control, taxes will be less, profiteering is adjusting itself, books with a few exceptions are cheap and in great demand, so for goodness sake let us all put our shoulders to the wheel and make this the biggest book year ever.

Faithfully yours,

THE OLD CORNER BOOK STORE INC.
By Richard F. Fuller, Treasurer.

Gentlemen:

We have just seen your open letter with reference to the conditions of the Christmas book business and are much interested in your forecast for Boston.

We have felt thruout the fall that the Christmas business this year would be better than ever. We have planned our business accordingly, and while we have experienced the slump which invariably comes during the Presidential election, we do not believe that the present indications point to a curtailment of the holiday trade which takes place between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

The book business, from our observations, never runs to the extremes which characterize certain other trades, and this year we consider publishers and booksellers all in a most fortunate position, for books have come into a wider appreciation on the part of the public in general than ever before. The prices of books, while increasing, are free from any taint of profiteering, and the character of the books published is more diverse and substantial in interest than usual. Never before have books seemed more appropriate as gifts, and it is inconceivable that the public, which has bought liberally during the year, will fail to respond to intelligent advertising and exploitation if publishers and booksellers alike keep, as they should, an optimistic note in their announcements and in the personnel of their establishments.

The conditions which confront Boston are, in the main, no different from those of any other locality and, therefore, we hope that you will pursue the policy which you outline in your letter and make your orders as liberal as possible—timing them so that we as publishers will have an opportunity for supplying stock before it is too late. This point is perhaps the most serious one from the standpoint of the publishers, as shipment of goods to other parts of the country is not as prompt as we could wish.

With congratulations on your fine showing,

Sincerely yours,

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY,

The United Bookstores Company Again

Eugene Christian, the author of several books on hygiene and diet, has been elected the President of the promoting company of the United Bookstores Company of America, and a new canvass is being made for subscriptions. The $50,000,000 needed is to be raised at ten dollars a share, and a special canvass is being made of teachers.

The officers, as announced in the new circular, are Eugene Christian, President, described as "a prominent member of the Authors' League of America, who has two million books in circulation"; he is actively to direct the policy of the Company. James A. Brewer, Vice-President, described as "an efficiency expert, who has made an exhaustive study of conditions affecting the book and stationery trades"; William R. Thurston, Secretary and Treasurer, as "having had long experience in corporate organization and finance."

The statement to possible subscribers is that there will be five subsidiary corporations and that each corporation can acquire from eight to ten stores each month, so that at the close of the year there would be in operation about five hundred stores. It is estimated that there would be four hundred and seventy dollars net profits on that first year's business. After painting the advantages of the chain store system, the success of the United Cigar Stores, the United Drug chain and others is pointed out. It is stated that the United Cigar Stores are now paying ninety per cent profit. On this the comment is: "We believe that the American people love books better than tobacco. We believe our profits will be as great or greater than the United Cigar Stores chain, and we know we will do more good."

In closing it is stated: "it would be difficult to estimate the effect upon the intelligence, prosperity and patriotism of the American people when the twenty-two thousand bookstores in this country (sic) are placed in a great national chain, when the inhabitants of each town and village are served by a high grade bookstore. It would be more difficult to estimate the amount of money such an enterprise would make for its early investors."

An earlier canvass to the publishers was made on a slightly different basis, but as far as is known none of the publishers subscribed. As far as can be at present ascertained, the company has no bookstores in operation.

Twenty-Five Years Ago in the Publishers' Weekly

Platt, Bruce & Co. will publish on the 6th inst. "Frigorous Cupid" by Anthony Hope.

The craze for collecting posters bids fair to take a strong hold on the faddists this winter. It is proving a serious thing for the publishers however for they find it very difficult to keep their posters displayed in bookstores and at news-stands. There are too many dealers who find it convenient and profitable to get posters for nothing and then sell them to collectors for a quarter of a dollar apiece.

Eugene Field, poet and humorist, died suddenly on the morning of the 4th inst. at his Buena Park home, Chicago.

It is said that since "The Prisoner of Zenda" was put on the stage in New York City more copies of the book have been sold than at any time since its publication.

Charles Scribner's Sons announce three books by A. T. Quiller-Couch.

Walter H. Page, formerly the editor of the Forum, has made an editorial engagement with Houghton Mifflin Co.

An Alabama paper says that an enterprising Yankee book agent is making a barrel of money in Alabama. He came from Connecticut and has been selling books chiefly to negroes. He soon came to appreciate the enthusiasm of the negro in matters of religion. He found that in all the illustrated Bibles the pictures of the angels were in white and he conceived the idea of having a Bible made for the colored race filled to overflowing with pictures of negro angels. The book cost him about $1.10 but he placed the first large shipment at $8 each, payable $2.50 cash, the balance in monthly payments. He is selling the Bibles as fast as he can get them delivered.

A New Firm in the Book Field

One of the new firms in the book field this year is the firm of Jackson, Schwab and Bee with an office at 32 Union Square. It is interested in the buying and selling of remainders and libraries, and invites the patronage of the publishers and book-trade generally. William C. Schwab and Henry Bee are book men of considerable experience and are well-known to the trade. Mark Jackson, while a stranger to the trade, has surrendered his interests in other fields to this enterprise.

THE CHICAGO PLAN FOR CO-OPERATIVE BOOK PUBLICITY IS PUT INTO PRACTICE

With a properly persuasive slogan followed up by pungent and pithy advertisement, the American public can be incited to "Swat the fly," "Say it with flowers," and possibly even to "Give Books." That is the opinion of the

They expressed their belief that it is the problem of such centralized organizations as this one to get the worth-while books to everybody and especially to the people of the surrounding

South America

Trade between the United States and Latin America will be fostered by the formation of a Postal Union as a result of the recent Congress of the International Postal Union. The Congress proposes to establish international payments on a gold dollar basis for the transit of mails, to fix an increased maximum rate for postage on international mail, and to create a Pan American Postal Federation to begin functioning after the Congress at Buenos Aires in 1921.

The Central American Navigation Company, has been recently organized and the United States Postal Department contracted on August 28, 1920, for seaplane mail service between the United States and Cuba, the mail to be transported by rail to Key West and thence to the Cuban capital. Mail for this route must be marked "via seaplane," the postage to be 6 cents per ounce or fraction of an ounce. This is the first United States contract to send foreign mail via seaplane. The mail will be carried in on flying boats, which also are equipped to carry both passengers and freight.

The Pleasures of Reading

Miss E. E. Corning, Assistant Book Buyer for the R. H. White Co. of Boston, well-known to the book-trade, writes in the White Star:

"The reading of books should make our outlook on life bigger and broader, and as the years pass on, these books, that touch on every subject known to the human mind, bring compensation in happiness to us who have spent years with them.

"When one thinks of that group of men and women who have enriched the whole world with their writings, both serious and entertaining, one should never be lonely or sad when a good book will lift one out of oneself. As time passes on our work will be recognized for its influence for good in whatever community books are sold. When I think of the future ahead for younger generations coming into the book business, I often wish I could be a Ponce de Leon but find the fountain of perpetual youth in mind and body."

RENEWED EFFORT TO LEGALIZE RE-SALE PRICE FIXING

By Waldon Fawcett

Altho, according to tradition at the Capitol, the final "short session" of a Congress of the United States is not the most auspicious time to seek approval for special legislation of any kind, a determined effort is to be made this winter to gain sanction for resale price fixing. In one sense, moreover, the pessimism that attaches to new legislation, when put forward at the final sitting of an expiring Congress, should not apply in full measure to this renewed quest for price standardization. The specific bill that would, if Congress consents, legalize the practice is new, but the principle involved is old and familiar to a majority of the members of the national legislature.

It is this status of the price standardization issue that inspires, on the part of some champions of the cause, hope that its resurrection may be followed by conclusive action, for all the scant time intervening before enforced adjournment on March 4, 1921. In the decade or more that resale price fixing has been seeking recognition at the hands of Congress it has been only occasionally and incidentally the subject of debate "on the floor." But individual Congressmen have been pretty thoroly informed as to the merits of the proposal. Even more to the point, the issue has been the subject of repeated and prolonged public hearings before the committees of Congress by which a bill must be "reported out" ere it can be brought to vote. With the preliminaries thus seemingly simplified, there is ground for hope that a price fixing bill, once on the calendar, may find the legislative body prepared to render a verdict speedily.

That the champions of retail price standardization have been able to accomplish little or nothing at Washington during the half decade covered by the world war and the initial period in the era of reconstruction requires no apology. For one thing, the crusaders lacked the old-time inspiration and support from the business community. Producers and distributors alike, borne forward on a wave of advancing prices, with the further impetus of inadequate stocks, felt scant need for a law to curb price cutting and prevent market demoralization. On the other hand, that portion of public sentiment and Congressional opinion which has been impatient of the current cost of living, has been blindly intolerant of any proposal that might bear suspicion of a means to stabilize retail prices at the level attained in recent years. Hence, the progress of the cause of price maintenance has been stayed at Washington, save for the efforts of the few merchandisers of trade-marked articles who have labored for Congressional converts out of season as well as in.

Less has been heard of the ideal of stabilized prices because, latterly, the national organizations, formed originally in behalf of "fair trade," have, while marking time on their primary undertaking, turned attention to the securance of national legislation to penalize "misbranding." Kin, tho it be to the first effort, this latter is of singularly little interest to the book-trade save in an academic sense. Indeed, books would seem to constitute one of the few classes of merchandise that are immune to technical misbranding. With the possible exception of specifications covering certain classes of book bindings there would appear to be no opportunity whatever in this quarter for the application of the doctrine of accurate branding.

A certain proportion of the well-wishers of price standardization hold, it should be confessed, to the opinion that the time is not yet ripe for the resurrection of the issue of resale price uniformity. They contend that the first session of the 67th Congress holds better promise than the final session of the 66th Congress for acceptance of the principle of fortified price stability. That the time is ripe to reopen the subject is, however, the judgment of Congressman Kelly of Pennsylvania, who has succeeded, in the rôle of sponsor of resale price fixing, that member of a former Congress whose name, given to the original Stephens Bill, has been attached by the lay public to all the successive measures to the same end.

In some respects the resale price fixing principle returns to the attack for legislative recognition confirmed and strengthened by the developments of the war and post-war period. For one thing, there is the circumstance that in a deranged commodity market, standard quality merchandise, under trade-mark or special brand, advanced in price more slowly and did not scale such heights, in most instances, as non-standard goods of anonymous origin. Books, for example, that rank as standard merchandise, stand, with respect to price revisions in convincing contrast to certain other classes of paper products in which the responsibilities of producers have been less clearly fixed. Congressman Kelly is collecting detailed evidence on this very significant phase of war-time price movements and plans to use it in support of his plea for a law "to protect the public against false pretenses in merchandising."

Not only in a positive but likewise in a negative manner has the turn of affairs worked to the advantage of the promoters of price standardization. So far as may be judged from the communications coming to Washington from the business community, opposition to legalized resale price fixing is now confined almost exclusively to the confirmed price cutters,—to retail interests that habitually and persistently offer merchandise at "cut rates" as a means of gaining trade. This is another way of saying that there has been an appreciable lapse of the opposition that came from retailers of recognized standing, notably from various department store interests. Indeed, Washington hears that the national organization formed by such interests to oppose price maintenance legislation has disintegrated while the issue has been in abeyance and that there is little enthusiasm for its revival.

Assuming that it is a correct diagnosis which reports to Washington less antagonism than formerly on the part of a majority of department store executives, there are several theories to explain the purported change of heart. The one that has most credence with close observers of the price standardization campaign, ascribes the reversal of form to the fact that an increasing proportion of department stores in all cities, instead of concentrating, as of yore, on the job lots that can be translated into "bargains," are seeking out and specializing on the standard, high-grade, nationally-advertised lines,—especially where exclusive agencies can be obtained,—and in harmony with the spirit of dependable merchandising are observing religiously the "fair" price schedules suggested for identified wares. That, in certain cities, ethically-conducted book departments have made headway against the competition of rival department stores that gloried in "sample," "hurt" and "cut-price" books has doubtless had its share of influence upon department store policy.

Whatever the chances of the early enactment of price standardization legislation, there is no question but that the latest edition of the program has unusual inherent interest as the studied and deliberate version of what should constitute a bill of rights in price stabilization. This new Kelly Bill, known officially as H. R. 14426, and introduced on the last day of the last session of Congress in order to be ready for a prompt jump-off in the new session, undertakes to dissipate all the objections that have been registered against previous measures to the same end by retail merchants who feared for their independence of action under price standardization. More than that, it is designed to accept the suggestion in governmental quarters that resale price fixing, if it is to have the sanction of Congress, should in all instances be contingent upon review of the fixed prices by a Federal agency competent to pass upon the reasonableness of the placarded prices and fairness of the profits contemplated by such prices.

The safeguard of governmental censorship of prices is supplied via the final section of the Kelly Bill (or as it is sometimes designated, the Stephens-Kelly Bill), which provides that upon the complaint of any person, partnership, corporation or association, being a party in interest, the Federal Trade Commission may terminate or regulate the terms of the whole or any part of any contract prescribing resale prices. The Trade Commission, by the by, would supposedly be conversant at all times with business procedure under the price-fixing privilege inasmuch as this same measure would require of every price-maker the filing with the Trade Commission of his schedules of prices to the trade and to the consuming public, together with a listing of the trade-marks or special brands, ownership of which may be advanced as the justification for price dictation.

The reader will not miss the significance of the fact that the Trade Commission's power of review would be exercised thru the supervision of contracts covering price maintenance. In truth, the whole foundation of this 1920 edition of the standardized price project rests, in contrast to some of its predecessors, upon contractual relations. The "uniform prices and manners of settlement at which different qualities and quantities of each article may be resold" are to be prescribed in contracts between a "vendor" (producer, manufacturer or owner) and a dealer, wholesale or retail. Elasticity would be given this form of contract by permission to provide for "disposal sales at appropriate times" during which periods dealers would be empowered to sell price-restricted articles at prices other than the uniform quotations ordinarily in force.

Reservations for the protection of the retailer to whom the title of goods has passed have been the subject of careful consideration in the drafting of the bill that is now on the desk of the law-making body. In discount of all probable emergencies, the dealer who is bankrupt, who desires to discontinue a line, or is winding up his business, is given permission to disregard the fixed uniform prices if, after thirty days' notice, the vendor of the wares involved has not exercised his option to buy back the goods at the price originally paid by the dealer. It is necessary, tho, that a dealer, ere proceeding with a sacrifice sale, shall file with the Federal Trade Commission at Washington a statement setting forth the reason for the sale and the quantity and quality of the articles to be disposed of.

Two of the provisions of the price protection measure are of especial interest to the book-trade. One of these is found in Section 2, which sets forth that the provisions of the price standardization act shall not apply to sales of articles to any State or public library or to any society or institution, incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, medical, scientific, philanthropic or literary purposes. The other point of intimate contact with the book-trade is found in a provision which gives to a price fixer the privilege of replacing instead of refunding on damaged, deteriorated or soiled articles. In other words, this alternative does not leave a publisher at the mercy of a dealer who might demand that he either buy back soiled or shopworn books at the full wholesale price or else consent to retail price concessions in the open market. He may, within the law, elect to give satisfaction to the dealer by exchanging for the soiled or damaged goods "similar articles not damaged." If the vendor decline to either buy back or exchange soiled or deteriorated goods and the dealer is left free to sell at less than the fixed prices, yet must the dealer give "prominent notice to the purchaser" that the article is damaged, deteriorated or soiled and that the price is reduced because of such damage.

Books for Belgian Youths

Mrs. John Lewis Griffiths has just returned from Belgium, where, as chairman of the Book Committee on Children's Libraries, she supervised the establishment of a children's library and reading room, which was placed in Brussels at the request of the Child's Welfare Commission of Belgium, which visited this country last year. It is the first in Europe on the American plan. Mrs. Griffiths and Mrs.

Gibson Fahnestock were received by Queen Elizabeth, who was greatly interested in the project.

In his address at the opening of the library M. Destree, the Minister of Science and Art, said:

"In America at the end of a year the librarian is happy that the books are worn, for he knows that his work is a success. In Europe the librarian is called a conservator when he guards the books from those by whom they are intended to be read. The example and the generosity of the American Committee will aid us in correcting this fault and bring about a transformation in the use of books."

Mrs. Griffiths said that Ambassador and Mrs. Brand Whitlock and the officials of Brussels gave the committee every assistance.

THE STEWART AND KIDD EXHIBIT OF FISHING BOOKS AT THE MARSHALL FIELD BOOK FAIR

SPECIALIZING IN FISHING BOOKS

A book exhibit is rather an interesting test of the news value of special items, and at the Marshall Field Fair it was found that a fisherman's exhibit planned by Stewart & Kidd Company from their rapidly developing list of fishing books was one of the most crowded parts of the floor. On fisherman's day Leonard Wood was at the booth, he having a wide reputation as a fisherman and being the author of the introduction to "Goin' Fishin'." Dixie Carroll was there, and local fishermen of repute. Among the interesting items in the case were the favorite reels of Grover Cleveland, who fished over Cape Cod waters so thoroly. The Chicago and Northwestern Railway took a photograph of the booth which it is using in a folder which is to show the fishing glories of its part of the country.

AN ENGLISH AUTHOR WRITES ON LITERARY TASTE IN AMERICA

With so many literary visitors to her shores, and one of her own best-known poets on a getting acquainted tour in England, America is hearing a great deal of the plain truth about herself. There has been a mild epidemic, too, of articles on American literature by literary men from other countries, a number of which have been recently quoted in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. One of the most kindly of America's critics is St. John Ervine, well-known here thru his plays and novels, and because of his recent visit. Some of the things he says of America in his article "Literary Taste in America" in the October 6, New Republic will be read by very appreciative audiences. The article was written apropos of an article on American poetry in the London Times Literary Supplement. He says:

"A few weeks ago the Times Literary Supplement devoted its first article to a consideration of contemporary American poetry. Incredible as it may seem, the writer of this article filled four or five columns in the Supplement without once mentioning the name of Edwin Arlington Robinson, or making any reference to his work. The fatuity of this omission would be equalled by that of an American commentator on English poetry who omitted all reference either to Bridges or to Masfield from his article. The omission was not deliberately made. It was the result of ignorance . . . Mr. Robinson is, perhaps, the most distinguished poet in America."

The article continues: "I would like now to complain of certain British authors who have visited the United States in the spirit of Moses coming down from the mountain with the tables of the law. I would urge upon English authors who are about to visit America that they should remember there are too many people in that country who are at least as intelligent as they are, and that there are quite a number of persons who are even more intelligent than they are. I would urge upon them, too, that they should not leave their manners on this side of the Atlantic. If one is to judge of the ordinary level of intelligence in England and America by a comparison of the popular magazines published in both countries, it seems to me to be indisputable that the average mind in America is a better mind than that in England. We have not got in England a popular magazine which is comparable, either in make-up or matter, with Harper's or the Century. The Saturday Evening Post is considered in America to be a very popular magazine indeed, but it is vastly better than any English magazine in the same category.

"It is fairly reasonable, I think, to base one's estimate of the mental calibre of a country on the quality of the ephemeral literature published in that country. If the quality is good, if the stories and articles printed in the popular magazines are such that an educated and cultured man can read them without boredom or disgust, one is surely entitled to believe that there is a fairly high level of intelligence and taste in the country which produces such magazines.

"English authors of high quality are nearly always more widely read in America than they are in England. The ordinary, plain American, with no pretensions to what is called 'highbrowism,' buys more books and reads more books than the same sort of man in England. American farmers read much, both of an ephemeral and a permanent character, whereas the English farmer, in my experience, reads little of any sort. There are hundreds of farmers in England who do not even read a daily paper, contenting themselves with the local weekly paper; but I doubt whether there are many farmers in America who do not read more in a month than an English farmer reads in a couple of years. Conditions of life probably have something to do with it. The winter in the United States is very severe, making outdoor labor almost, if not entirely, impossible, and therefore the American farmer is compelled to use his mind to a greater extent than his English brother whose farm employs his energies almost as much in winter as it does at any other part of the year. I have seen letters to American booksellers and publishers from American farmers, inquiring about the works of Thomas Hardy and Bernard Shaw! I imagine that the sales of Mr. Conrad's books in America far exceed, in proportion to the population, their sales in England. Mr. Wells, Mr. Bennett and Mr. Galsworthy are read more extensively in America than they are in England. I found, too, that Dickens was still enormously popular there, whereas in England his popularity, still great among older people, is diminishing among the younger folk.

"I do not claim for the American people any more than this, that they have a greater curiosity about good things than the English people have and I am not oblivious to the fact that an extensive acquaintance with meritable or great authors does not necessarily coincide with sound judgment, but I do claim that the American average man does interest himself in work of quality to a far greater extent than the English average man.

"It is when we come to compare the best taste in America with the best taste in England that we begin to discover a difference to the credit of England. The critical faculty is not strong in the United States, and books and authors are sometimes praised in a fashion that is altogether disproportionate to their merits.

"The whole of America seems to me to be inhabited, generally speaking, by an amazingly eager population which is cramming its mind with a medley of knowledge, not all of which is worth possessing, and much of which cannot be assimilated; and the result is a combination of quite extraordinary information concerning, say literature, and an equally extraordinary inability to say whether a book is a great book, a good book, a meritable book or a bad book.

"America has had men of genius, Walt Whitman, Emerson, Edgar Allan Poe, Mark Twain, and will certainly have many more, and she has writers of a very high degree of merit producing books that can stand easily in the company of the best books being produced in England by contemporary novelists, men and women such as Edith Wharton, Zona Gale, Ellen Glasgow, Winston Churchill, Ernest Poole, Joseph Hergesheimer, Theodore Dreiser and Booth Tarkington, but the conditions of life in America do not make the way easy for men of genius to appear. The high state of uniformity or standardization has at once the effect of flattening out individuality and of producing a degree of self-contentment which is impatient of criticism; and without a healthy spirit of criticism the way of the very individual man is exceedingly hard.

"But the signs are good. When the mixed elements that make up the modern United States have become more effectively blended and the recollections of Europe have faded out of the people's minds and there is definitely an American race, deriving more from America than from Europe, there will come not only a greater growth of criticism, applied to every department of human existence, but also a great flowering of genius."

Indiana Schools Handle Textbooks

On account of the fact that the booksellers have found it unprofitable to handle textbooks, at the margin provided by the state law of Indiana, the schools themselves have been obliged to set up machinery, and in Indianapolis the Board of School Commissioners decided to go into the school-book business. Indiana is one of the two northern states that still asks its pupils to buy the books, and the state law provides a fifteen per-cent margin for the large depository, and out of that a ten per-cent margin for the retailer. The retail stores have gradually dropped out of handling them, as it was impossible to do this at that rate and cover the cost.

Unfair Competition

The Federal Trade Commission has issued a formal complaint against the Federal Press of Portland, Oregon, and C. W. Parker, President. It is charged that there has been unfair competition in the publication and sale of books entitled "Who's Who in the Northwest" and "Who's Who and Why." The complaint alleges that the Federal Press books are approximately the same size, color, binding and general appearance of books published by its competitor. The Company has been given forty days to file an answer to the complaint made against it.

J. K. Gill Co. Encourages Thrift Among Its Employees

The J. K. Gill Company has just presented to each of its employees of six months standing or better, a life insurance policy. These policies were taken out under the heading of Group Insurance, and without physical examination on the part of the insured, and will be continued to its employees as long as they remain in the service of the Company.

The policies were accompanied by a letter stating that they in no way affected the remuneration or chances of advancement of the employees of the Company.

This recognition of the spirit of the time was appreciatively received by all the employees, especially by those, who after having been with this firm for many years, had reached the age when insurance is difficult to get and expensive to maintain.

A pleasant feature of the announcement was the appreciative personal letter to each of the employees from the President of the Company, Joseph K. Gill, who started in the book business in Oregon 54 years ago.

As was announced in the columns of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY some months ago this firm, having outgrown its present quarters and, looking to the future, recently contracted for a 100 x 100 plot of ground in the heart of the business district and proposes to erect thereon a modern building for the housing of its business.

AMONG THE PUBLISHERS

"DOMNEI" by James Branch Cabell is a revised edition of the novel first published as "The Soul of Melicent." It has an introduction by Joseph Hergesheimer. (McBride.)

THE MANY READERS, whose combined thrill of pleased discovery formed the "sensation" at the publication of Mme. Audoux's "Marie Claire" ten years ago, will welcome the sequel, "Marie Claire's Workshop" (Thomas Seltzer).

"RETAIL ORGANIZATION and Accounting Control," by Philip I. Carthage, is a book that will interest all proprietors and executives of retail stores. It discusses in detail all the best modern systems for operation, contracts, merchandising, and sales promotion as applied to the retail store. (Appleton).

"TALKS TO WRITERS," by Lafcadio Hearn, which Dodd, Mead has brought out recently is material selected by John Erskine of Columbia University, from "Interpretations of Literature" and "Life and Literature" collections of the lectures which Lafcadio Hearn gave at the University of Tokio.

CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK and the approaching Christmas season have spurred the publisher to his best efforts. Among the many beautiful juveniles, a new edition of Mrs. Ewing's stories takes its place. It has pictures by Edna Cooke. (Duffield.)

AGNES CARY lived for months in the household of the Empress Eugenie at Farnborough in England. The journal and the many letters which she wrote while there have furnished the material for her charming, chatty narrative, "Empress Eugenie in Exile" (Century).

THE REMARKABLE story of British propaganda in enemy countries during 1918 is told by Sir Campbell Stuart in the "Secrets of Crewe House" published by Hodder and Stoughton and imported by Doran. In a foreword, the author says: "Much that was interesting, and even dramatic, can never be divulged. Otherwise many who did valuable and dangerous service might, by breach of faith, be exposed to reprisal."

A MODEST-LOOKING biography of great interest was published by the American Medical Association, this week. It is the life of General George M. Sternburg, written by his wife. He was the pioneer bacteriologist in this country. In 1880, he discovered the micro-organism of pneumonia before Pasteur announced his findings. As Surgeon-general of the army he established the Yellow Fever Commission, whose work was one of the most heroic and valuable of American experiments.

JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER's new book, "San Christóbal de la Habana" has just been published by Knopf. It is a slim book of unusual beauty.

IN "Prejudices: Second Series," H. L. Mencken is more concerned with underlying ideas than he was in the first series which dealt more with specific authors. (Knopf.)

THE FIRST American edition of Max Beerbohm's "Seven Men" is limited to two thousand copies. It has an appendix and six drawings which are not published elsewhere. (Knopf.)

FIVE SHORT STORIES of Henry James, have just been published by Thomas Seltzer, under the title of the first story, "Master Eustace." This is the second and final volume of the early stories of James, never before published in this country.

"THE AFFABLE STRANGER" by Peter McArthur, published by Houghton Mifflin, was written after an investigation by the author in our eastern states to discover the reason for the growing distrust of America across the Canadian border. The author is one of Canada's most widely read journalistic writers. His pursuit of truth is with a light and joyful step.

It is said that a new formula for the mystery story has been created by Melville Davisson Post. He departs from the method of Poe and Gaboriau who built up a mystery and then explained it, and develops mystery and solution together. The new method is employed in "The Sleuth of St. James's Square" published by Appleton.

THIS MIGHT almost be called Biography Week, so many interesting and important biographies have appeared within a few days. Among them, a hasty glance discovers: the long awaited, "Margot Asquith: An Autobiography" in two volumes from Doran; "The Life of Joseph Hodges Choate as gathered chiefly from his letters, including his own story of his boyhood and youth" by Edward Sanford Martin, published by Scribners; "Villiers: His Five Decades of Adventure," an autobiography of one of the most picturesque and probably the last of the old school of war correspondent published by Harper; "A Cycle of Adams Letters, 1861-1865" family letters of Charles Francis Adams, Charles Francis Adams, Jr., and Henry Adams, published by Houghton Mifflin; "The Life and Letters of Hamilton W. Mabie" lecturer, editor, and author, by Edwin W. Morse (Dodd, Mead); "John Bourroughs, Boy and Man" by Clara Barrus, (Doubleday); and a new edition of "An Adventure With A Genius, Recollections of Joseph Pulitzer" by Alleyne Ireland, now published by Dutton.

Books That Should Be Written

Frederick A. Stokes Company,
 New York, November 1, 1920.

Editor of PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

We have followed with much interest the suggestions from libraries under the heading "Books That Should Be Written," and have observed that a number of our recent and forthcoming books answer exactly the needs expressed in several cases.

It is interesting to note, for instance, that the demand in the October 9 issue for a history of the United States similar to MacGregor's "The Story of France" is fully met by our "The Story of the United States" by Maria L. Herdman, which is, indeed, uniform in style with the MacGregor book.

In the October 16 issue the demand for "one-act plays for amateurs" seems to be entirely filled by our just published "High School Farces" by Frederick Trevor Hill.

In the same issue the request for "fiction, developing solutions of the present day rational problems" is met by "The Underworld" by James Welsh, which tells the story of life in the English coal mines.

The following list shows other instances in which our list meets the expressed needs of the libraries:

In the October 16 issue: Books on Iron and Steel. "Non-Technical Chats on Iron and Steel" by L. W. Spring.

Up-to-date Business Forms, "What Every Business Man Should Know" by L. C. Kearney; "The Efficient Secretary" by Ellen Lane Spencer.

Technical Books, "Farm and Garden Tractors" by A. Frederick Collins.

In the October 23 issue: Bible Stories for Little Children, "A Nursery Story of the Bible" by Louise M. Pleasanton.

Interesting Biographies for Children, "A Treasury of Heroes and Heroines" by Clayton Edwards.

Plantation Life in the South, "Tom and I on the Old Plantation" by Archibald Rutledge.

We could go on with further instances, but these we mention seem to indicate a curious coincidence between our list and the needs felt by librarians. No doubt other publishers' lists would show similar instances and an interesting note might be made for the WEEKLY.

Tacoma Public Library,

Tacoma, Washington, 23 October, 1920.

Editor of PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

I was interested in the way you have brought before the publishing trade the suggestions regarding "Books That Should Be Written."

If this letter reaches you in time I would add to the books to be written "A Comprehensive Treatise on Veneer Manufacturing."

JOHN B. KAISER, Librarian.

Personal Notes

MRS. SOPHIE KERR UNDERWOOD on November 1 retired from the managing editorship of the Woman's Home Companion to devote all her time to writing. Miss Kerr, as she is known to the reading world, was connected with the Woman's Home Companion for about twelve years.

EDMUND GOSSE, the distinguished author, who is in his seventy-second year, was presented with a bronze bust of himself on November 9, subscribed as a token of affection and esteem by friends. The presentation was made by Arthur Balfour at a gathering presided over by the Marquis of Crewe.

Business Notes

CHICAGO, ILL.—Paulus List has retired as manager of the Wartburg Publishing House of Chicago, and will be succeeded by Curt Etzold.

THE WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS

This list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth. Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in brackets] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date; otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK CLIPPINGS AND PHOTOGRAPHS WANTED

The observances of Children's Book Week are to be widespread and varied in character, judging by the preliminary reports received and the great amount of material called for. The Committee in charge of this work would greatly appreciate receiving photographs and clippings of all local efforts, in order that there may be kept some adequate record of what has been accomplished, and to aid writing reports and in planning the work for another year on an even broader scale.

Send material to

RARE BOOKS, AUTOGRAPHS AND PRINTS

The estate of Aldworth belonging to Lord Tennyson has been sold but the library of the poet remains as when he last used it.

At the recent sale of the Ravensworth Castle library at Newcastle, England, the original folio edition of Audubon's "Birds of America," brought $2,000.

The fund raised in the United States for the restoration of the Library of the University of Louvain has reached $150,200.58; the executive committee has renewed its appeal for subscriptions to complete the fund of $500,000.

In commemoration of the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, Mass., December 21, 1620, and the founding of free institutions in America, the New York Historical Society has placed on exhibition, in its rooms at 170 Central Park West, a notable collection of books and manuscripts relating to New England.

The announcement of the new corporation to take over the auction business of Charles F. Heartman, now of Rutland, Vt., has just been issued. The new corporation, The Heartman Auction Company, Inc., has leased its business quarters, in Rutland, and will hold its first sale November 23, consisting of rare Americana, pamphlets and books, from various consignments.

An extensive exhibition of Whistler etchings has been opened at the Knoedler Galleries. It includes the "French set," the "Thames set," the "Belgian set," and the "Venetian set." The French etchings are the earliest prints of Whistler and were the result of a tour in Alsace-Lorraine in 1858. The "Venetian Series" followed shortly after the famous libel suit with Ruskin. The writer of the catalog points out that the time is over for assembling such collections of Whistler's etchings as the nearly complete collections already existing, led by the superb Freer collection now belonging to the United States Government. But Whistler collectors may always be prepared for surprises. "Who would have suspected," asks the New York Times, "a bunch of forty water colors lying in ambush in Baltimore?"

The American Art Association has issued the following list of sales to be conducted under the management of its book and print department before the holidays: November 23 and 24, library sets, first editions and art books from several collections including the estates of Gustave Kobbé, of Bayshore, L. I., Edwin E. Jackson, Jr., of Brooklyn, and Robert Maxwell, of this city; December 2 and 3, John Boland's collection of etchings comprising examples of Daubigny, Jacque, Lalanne, Mielatz, Millet, Pennell and other masters; December 7, a collection of modern etchings, the property of Mrs. Eben Sutton, of Baltimore, and, also, that of Mrs. John G. Holmes; December 8 and 9, an important collection of Americana, the property of an old New York collector; December 10, the private library of the late Henry J. Heinz, of Pittsburgh, consisting of costume books, art publications and Japanese colored plate books; December 20 and 21, an important collection, the property of the late Henry S. Marlor, of this city, and others, consisting of English literature, early printed books, illuminated manuscripts, rare editions of the Bible and Book of Common Prayer, fifteenth and sixteenth century missals, autograph letters of famous composers, and original manuscripts of American and English authors.

Far Western Americana, mainly relating to California, Oregon, the Pacific Coast and the Hawaiian Islands, from the collection of Boutwell Dunlap, historian and bibliographer of San Francisco, were sold at the Anderson Galleries November 8 and 9. The most valuable item was Figueroa's "Manifiesto a la Republica Mexicana," a 12mo pamphlet, in the original wrappers, printed in Montrey in 1835, which was bought by Dr. Rosenbach for $1,500. Figueroa was California's first printer and this was his second and most important book, of which only three copies are known to exist and this is the only perfect one. A second edition, in English and the only translation, printed in San Francisco, in 1855, brought $255. A series of California land claims in the early 50's brought from $50 to $100 each. There were also some early and extremely rare items in reference to the Vigilantes of San Francisco, which brought good prices, the highest, a copy of "Judges and Criminals: Shadows of the Past," 8vo, wrappers, San Francisco, 1858, the only known copy, realizing $200. For two or three years especially, there has been an active demand for historical material about the central and far west, and prices have been rapidly increasing. There were some sensational advances last year, and this sale shows that the interest is as active as ever. The 675 items realized $8,948.20.

The latest reports from Russia bring information in regard to the destruction of literary treasures that surpass the record of the Mohammedan in the days of the Byzantine Empire. Bookstores no longer exist; they are now, without exception, national property. The vast literature of "capitalism and Christianity" is being ruthlessly destroyed. The communist has no use for the Bible, for Dante, Milton and Bunyan. The initiative of the printer or the publisher has gone with the absorption of their enterprises. Practically all of the books now being printed are Marxian or non-Christian books and these are said to be inaccurate and one-sided. The documents and records of the old regime; the history and literature of the capitalistic era; the books pertaining to the history of Christianity and that were a result of its influence, all are disappearing in the wholesale destruction now going on. The Russian classics in the homes of the peasants and in the libraries remain, but should they be regarded as inimical to communism they will follow the literatures of the Western nations. What this vast destruction of accumulated knowledge of the world and the limitation of the use of the printing press and the instruments of distribution to communistic propaganda means for the future of the Russian people no one can tell; it looks like a revival of the Dark Ages for nearly 200,000,000 people.

A remarkable collection of Stevenson material is now in the possession of the Brick Row Bookshop, of this city, and was recently exhibited in Chicago. It includes autograph letters of four decades, from the 50's to the 80's, beginning with childhood scrawls, letters from boarding school; humorous letters in Latin, in dialect, and in rhyme; intimate personal letters about health, family and friends; journal letters, thirty pages long about his travels; literary letters with copious references to his leading contemporaries and to his own writings; letters from George Meredith to Stevenson; manuscripts; outline sketches of his novels; plans and outlines for works never completed; three complete chapters, with outlined chapter sketches for an unpublished novel, "Henry Shovel," written in 1890; and other material not less interesting.

Part II of selections from the purchases and stock of the late George D. Smith, rare book dealer of this city, consisting mainly of books from the Arbury Hall Library, was sold November 11 and 12, at the Anderson Galleries. The 368 items realized $60,822.50. Some of the more important items were Chapman's "An Homeros dayes Myrth," London, 1509, fine copy of the rare first edition, $1,000; Gosynhill's "The Prayse of all women, called Mulierum Pean," London, n. d. $1,035; twenty-two volumes of manuscript reviews by Bret Harte of the works of Lowell, Edward Everett Hale, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, C. C. Leland and other writers of the period, each bound in levant morocco by Reviere, $750; Herrick's "Hesperides," London, 1648-47, fine copy of the first edition, $1,100; Homer's "Opera Omnia, Greece," 2 vols., folio, Florence, 1488, first edition, $1,150; Lovelace's "Lucasta," London, 1659, first edition, $860; Montaigne's "Essayes," small folio, London, 1603, first edition of Florio's translation, $550; Morton's "New Englands Memoriall," small quarto, Cambridge, 1669, first edition, $1,150; "The Lamentable Tragedie of Locrine," small quarto, London, 1595, one of the seven pseudo plays, $3,000; Shakespeare's "Much adoe about Nothing," London, 1600, rare first edition, $3,500; and a unique collection of the year books of King Henry the Sixth from the celebrated presses of Richard Pynson and his successor (Robert Redman, and others, 34 vols., small folio, uniformly bound in crushed brown levant morocco, London, 1510-69, $5,500. Dr. Rosenbach and Gabriel Wells were the heaviest buyers of the very rare and costly items.

PINOCCHIO

By C. COLLODI

GIFT EDITION. 14 illustrations in color by Maria L. Kirk. Page decorations. Handsome cloth binding. Octavo. $2.50 net.

SPECIAL EDITION. 14 illustrations in color by Maria L. Kirk. Specially Mounted on Gray Mats. Page Decorations. Lining Papers, and an Exquisite Binding in Green with Buff Cloth Back, Stamped in Gold, with a Silk Marker. In a box. Large Octavo. $6.00 net

Pinocchio was a piece of wood until the great event. Geppetto, the beggar, carved the wood into a doll, and the doll danced away a living puppet, by name, Pinocchio. A more delightful children's story than this Italian classic it would be impossible to find.

HEIDI

SPECIAL EDITION Large octavo
14 illustrations in color by Maria L. Kirk; specially mounted on gray mats. Page decorations; lining papers; and an exquisite binding in light blue buckram, with white cloth back resembling parchment stamped in gold, with a blue silk marker, in a box. $6.00 net

This sweetest of child stories has never had more exquisite setting than in these editions, intended for special gifts. The illustrations in color interpret faithfully the charm and truth of this tale of little Heidi and her home in the Alps. An immortal child classic.

ARTHUR RACKHAM'S

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

Illustrated by ARTHUR RACKHAM

Octavo. Rackham cover design.

$2.00 net

Last year we published an Arthur Rackham edition of Cinderella, illustrated (with the exception of the frontispiece) entirely in silhouette. It proved to be one of our best selling Christmas juveniles. This year, Arthur Rackham has selected "The Sleeping Beauty" as the subject for his skilful pencil. The result is a book of alluring beauty, that will delight every child. The silhouettes have the Rackham touch, the fairy witchery which the children love. Printed in large clear type, on white opaque paper, with a handsome binding of Rackham's own design.
